

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing to complain about Migration Amendment (Visa Capping) Bill 2010. I have been in Australia since 2002, at the age of 17. With all of my passion, energy, optimism and hard working during these years, I have completed my Bachelor of Commerce study in UNSW in 2007, then my Master degree in 2008. Now I have married, my husband and I bought a brand new apartment with our best wishes of settling down in this "beautiful" country. I am now employed by one of Australian most prosperous and reputable universities as an Assistant Accountant, paying more than $10k of tax per annual; I have spent almost 10 years here in Sydney with all my friends, and waiting patiently for my PR application to finally go through.

We have lodged our PR application at the end of 2008, fulfilled all the requirements, and with the hope of getting PR in the near future. But now, the new policy will kick us out of the country, this is just unfair, compare to people who get married with a Australian citizen and those who have family members to sponsor, it is just too cruel not to give us, who has dedicated ourselves and worked so hard toward our goals and have already submitted the PR application. Not even mentioning how much money we have spent on our education and living expense.

We love this country as all the Aussie people do; we contribute our part like every other Australian. Please give us the right that we deserve and consider people like us before you pass this change to the immigration laws.

Thanks very much!
