- under a continuing detention order a 'terrorist offender' is committed to detention in a prison for the period the order is in force, which can be up to three years,
- a continuing detention order must be reviewed by the Court at least annually,
- the continuing detention of minors is not permitted, and
- an interim detention order of up to 28 days may be made by the Court in circumstances where an offender will be released before the application for a continuing detention order has been determined, and consecutive interim orders may be granted for up to three months.
