While I state clearly that I do not identify myself by a specific political party, I believe that any medium in which the Australian public refers to should be devoid of party affiliation and bias. The current media landscape in Australia serves as a mechanism to divide and polarise opinion. A country that prides itself on multiculturalism and diversity of thought is disserved by the Murdoch media and I would ask, as a citizen that the voice of Australian is yet again realigned to true values of this great nation.
