Answer:

The National COVID-19 Coordination Commission (NCCC) is purely an advisory body. The NCCC is not a decision making body.

The NCCC has been set up as a division within the Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet (PM&C), which is a Non-corporate Commonwealth entity.

The NCCC is a division within PM&C. Unlike Deputy Secretaries, Mr Neville Power is employed as a contractor not as a member of the Senior Executive Service. He does not participate in PM&C Executive Board meetings and does not have responsibilities in relation to the administration of the Department more broadly.

The Chair, Mr Power, works closely with, and consults, the Secretary of PM&C, Mr Phil Gaetjens, who is also involved in NCCC business through his role as a member of the NCCC Executive Board. NCCC advice is not cleared by the Secretary.

As a division of PM&C, the NCCC is subject to all the same legislative requirements as PM&C. In accordance with clause 12.1 of Commissioners' contracts, they must perform services in compliance with all applicable legal (including statutory and regulatory) and Australian Government policy requirements.

The NCCC is complying with existing departmental policies by following internal guidance and procedures and has done so since the NCCC's inception.

The Cabinet Handbook sets out the guiding principles of cabinet confidentiality, collective responsibility and solidarity. It is essential that the confidentiality of cabinet documents is maintained, including draft Cabinet documents, documents which reveal cabinet deliberations, and documents which are prepared to brief Ministers on matters proposed for Cabinet consideration.

The Commissioners are engaged as contractors.

Mr Liveris was invited by the Chair, Mr Neville Power, to become a Special Adviser to the Commission on manufacturing. Mr Liveris' previous roles internationally on manufacturing were known to the Commission at the time of his invitation to take up the role of Special Adviser.

Mr Liveris was asked to look at the future prospects of manufacturing in Australia and provide advice to the Commission. The work was done to provide support to Government on Australia's economic recovery coming out of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Mr Liveris signed a private interest disclosure statement. The obligations under the Foreign Influence Transparency Scheme arise irrespective of the Commissioner's role or position within the Commission, and would be the same for working group members.
