

Hi,

I'm not sure how this email can help, but here's my 2 cents anyway!

Over the past few years I have been reading various books on nuclear power generation and listened to podcasts both for and against the subject, and as far as I'm concerned in this day and age with all the lessons learnt from past nuclear catastrophes plus our current and ongoing technology and research as well as Australia's natural resources, it's a no brainer!

Nuclear power is the way of the future and Australia needs to adopt and embrace (if you will) this form of renewable, efficient, safe, clean and sustainable energy.

I could go on for hours on the subject, but alas would only fall on deaf ears! Anyone who dares mention the "N" word are usually ignored, shunned, scolded or lectured to within an inch of their life whilst governments run and bury their heads in the sand and those of a left wing disposition jump up and down waving their banners screaming blue murder!

So on that note, good luck and maybe one day all Australians can use their A/C's and heaters without having to remorgage their homes.

Sincerely,
Adam Medica.
