

Hi,

I would like to strongly oppose this Migration Amendment (Visa Capping) Bill 2010 [Provisions]. I also came here on student visa and fortunate enough to get my citizenship recently. Even though I had to work hard and pay the international fees like any other international students but find it rewarding that I eventually got through. However it doesn't seem like that Australian government knows the facts about international student life or just wants to turn a blind eye. My whole point about saying this is that it is big injustice to international students who have been waiting for couple of months or even couple of years for there application result. They had been hanging for so long that every next day they would be allowed to stay in country they had struggled. Also the students and government know that when students are paying such a huge amount of international fees, they are looking forward for permanent residence. So I would urge them to make changes only for those who are just coming as international students or are thinking of coming and haven't spend so many years and money here in Australia. Atleast who is coming for international studies should think twice before choosing Australia as there home. But you guys won't do it because you want to boom your economy from international students fees and also making mockery of there money and time of immigrants with such rules. No body should forget that international students were also one of those who helped Australia to come out of recession.
