Introduction

Our HR Company welcomes the opportunity to make a submission to the Australian Senate's Inquiry into the welfare of International Students.

We recognise that international education is Australia's third largest export industry after coal and iron ore, and we also recognise the cultural value international students bring to Australia.

Our interest is in the cultural integration of students. We believe cultural orientation is an integral factor in providing students with a positive and memorable experience, and together with the English language would help students feel comfortable and welcome in our society. Social inclusion will occur if people know the parameters and expectations of the society in which they live, and respect the customs, behaviours and norms of the host country.

Cultural orientation can be seen as a mutual obligation which would differentiate Australia and enhance its reputation as a country of choice for international students when seeking high quality education.

Senate Inquiry's Terms of reference

- Student safety;
- Adequate and affordable accommodation;
- Social inclusion;
- Student Visa Requirements;
- Adequate international students supports and advocacy;
- Employment rights and protections from exploitation;
- Appropriate pathways to permanency

This submission responds to two terms of reference:

- Social inclusion
- International student support

Our Concept

At Our HR Company we believe we can contribute to the International Student industry by providing a program based on the observed needs by its Managing Director, Margaret Harrison. Working across Asia for several years, the cultural differences between countries are abundantly clear and most particularly the differences in behaviours, customs and norms. The working title of a cultural orientation program we are developing is 'Settling In@: a cultural orientation program for International Students'.

International students provide diversity and support to the education sector in Australia which in turn benefits our students and the whole community. This provides us with the opportunity to give back and assist their immediate integration and well-being while in Australia.

Pre- and post-arrival, students are presented with a great deal of information about life in Australia such as housing, banking, work, public transport and safety but nothing about behaviours that are acceptable in a western country. Unfortunately we still live in a world where some people do not readily accept differences and this often results in students feeling uncomfortable and alienated in their host country.

This program would address all aspects of different personal behaviours, customs and norms, together with practical realities, safety issues, and the opportunities that are readily available in the community for social integration. The optimum time for involving students in this orientation is within the first weeks of their arrival. In some instances it may also be beneficial pre-arrival.

Term of reference: Social inclusion

Cultural orientation is integral to the welfare and social inclusion of International Students. It will differentiate Australia as a host country, and provide an opportunity to significantly contribute to their comfort and well-being.

Support

We have been working on a cultural orientation program with

- Victorian Multicultural Commission
- A.F.I.S.
- Consul General of India
- Federation of Indian Associations Victoria
- Victoria Police

The value of impartiality

- We believe a cultural orientation program presents a mutual obligation opportunity for Australia to demonstrate the value it places on International Students, and also to be a mechanism to integrate new and emerging communities.
- We believe a cultural orientation program needs to be provided by people with no vested interests in the industry. Universities, private providers and agents have vested interests and shy away from the ‘difficult’ issues of behaviours, customs and expectations.
- The provision of cultural orientation will require investment, and the provider will need the experience, expertise and resources to conduct such a program nationally and perhaps internationally.

Cultural orientation must be impartial, and include areas which are often deemed “difficult”.
