

Dear Sir/Madam:

This Bill raises a great panic.

I have collected many opinions from different sources. Mostly, people reckon this bill, which may be used to cap GSM bridging visa holders, is UNFAIR, RIDICULOUS and pretty INSANE.

Reasons are:

1, for the people who are waiting their PR, they have already promised that their visa application materials are real, based on the fact, and meet all the requirements. The problems like economic, job market and big number of applicants etc., are not their faults. "Cap" them and send them back home without a reason, is UNFAIR.

2, I know many people are waiting their GSM visa. They have been in Australia for years. Most of them are planning to stay in Australia for the rest of their life, because they never thought their application "Can Be cancelled".

Many of them find a good job, have good cars, some of them even purchased their first house in Australia, or invest money into some business. They also have lots of friends here, brothers and sisters, and they consider Australia as their "second homeland"

Forcing any of them back home without a really really strong reason is very INHUMAN and RIDICULOUS.

3, this bill will raise a huge social problem. No matter how it is going to operate, it directly put thousands of people into incredible panic. The proposal of this bill is without any careful thought. So I'd say this bill is INSANE.

Really sorry for my bad English. Thank you for your time of reading.

Regards

Kyle Chen
