

Submission for the Regulator of Medical Cannabis Bill 2014

Denying herbal medication which is necessary and could be freely available at no risk, is a crime against the Australian people. Marihuana is, as many people know by now, very beneficial in cancer treatment. There is also no doubt that it help enormously with epilepsy and glaucoma. Recent studies have found that Marihuana helps against Alzheimer.

The trouble is that this is a political debate and decision, rather than a medical one. Medical professionals can still be persecuted if they come out about the therapeutic value of Marihuana and they are afraid to suggest the use. Growers who provide Marihuana oil for medical purposes live a dangerous life as well.

There have been so many trials and studies and if 'normal' people would be allowed to come out of the woodworks and tell their experience, we could change the situation very quickly. We don't need extensive studies any more. Let people grow their own!

I hope this helps!
