

Senate Wind Enquiry

The development of wind farms for power generation in Australia is simply so important to a balanced development of our green resources. We also have some great companies involved in this area that may in the longer term make real contributions to Australia's technical knowledge in this area. The ability of wind farms to positively contribute to the viability of hill farms and their local communities is important in keeping them alive.

Yours sincerely

Professor David Morris