

Dear Madam or Sir,

I believe that it is essential for Australia to invest in our sustainable energy sources, such as rural wind farms. To squander the gift of cheap fuel that we now have, and not invest the proceeds toward sustainable sources of fuel for our future is not only immoral, but will have a significant negative social and economic impact on future generations. Not having a ready and cheap fuel source will lead to strife and deprivation, and these future costs must be part of your considerations. Another essential to consider is Australia's moral standing in world affairs. We can't expect to be able to influence others if we don't ourselves take a strong lead.

Yours sincerely,

Thomas Greig
