Submission No:

10 June 2004

16 JUN 2004

Guy Bailey 59 Sewell Street Fast Fremantle WA, 6158

Bonkenups

Senator Bronwyn Bishop Chairperson House of Representatives Standing Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs Parliament House Canberra ACT 2600

Dear Senator,

BANKRUPTCY LEGISLATION AMENDMENT (ANTI AVOIDANCE & OTHER MEASURES) BILL 2004

I wish to register my deepest concern that the legislative changes referred to above could be enacted in a form represented by the recent Exposure Draft.

I am 38 years of age, in business as a marine fuel agent and I have always taken a prudent and conservative approach to the conduct of both my business career and my personal financial position.

Your proposed legislative changes effectively lift the corporate veil. Clause 49 of the Exposure Draft EM states. Anothile asset protection arrangements are not uncommon the Government considers that they should not continue..."

There is absolutely no doubt that the corner stone of the private enterprise system is the survival of the availability of limited liability.

My understanding of the law that was to be considered, is that it was to be based on the joint task force report "Use of Pankruptcy & Family Law to Avoid Tax "

The draft of the proposed togislation makes no mention of tax avoidance and has the effect of being retrospective legislation that attacks the related assets of every person who becomes bankrupt for whatever reason

The Attorney-General has accorrently stated that professionats should have insurance cover and thus the legislation should not affect them. I would remind you of three issues

- 1 Not everyone is a professional person; the proposed faw covers any person who becomes a bankrupt including all those in business taking risks the same as every other busilless person.
- 2 Insurance is not always available, and even if it is, there is no guarantee it will cover the risks incountered or be evailable. There is also the issue of HIH insurance that felled not so long ago and left people with exposures.

3 Most people who go bankrupt do not do so to avoid tex - those persons are in a minority.

It is clear that no consideration has been given to the following consequences of this legislation.

- A person in business who has a "no fault bankruptcy" such as due to a bad debt or inability to insure is being penalised for trying to protect their assets for their family.
- Single people would get no relief from any seizure orders as they have no other parties to consider for hordship.
- "Long tail" litigation could be unincurable for doctors and other essential professional persons who may get such long after an insolvency event happens and any assets held would be at risk. For example a doctor who is such 10 plus years after a negligence takes place.
- With recent case law on liabilities for non-executive directors of companies, non-resident directors' indirect assets would be at risk. This is likely to cause a reduction of investment in this country.
- Professionals and busin is people who take risks are likely to reduce their exposure to risk and this will have a direct impact on people wanting to go into business and employ people. This will have a direct impact on employment and GDP over time.
- Banks and other tenders will be forced to take further security to counteract the effect of the legislation, which will reduce returns to unsecured creditors, thus defeating the alleged objective of the proposed legislation.
- People close to retirement who lose access to assets held in related entities will become a burden on the social security system and medical system, as they will never recover financially or mentally from losing everything.

I support legislation that stops tax avoidance through bankruptcy however it needs safeguards that: -

- Allow people who logally have assets in related entities and who become bankrupt, to retain assets that have not been deliberately diverted JUST PRIOR to bankruptey to avoid their tax or other responsibilities. This is relatively easy for a bankruptey trustee to determine.
- Keep the existing funds of relation back periods.
- > Modify the legislation to specifically make it applicable to tax avoidance
- Remove the onus of proof or the backrupt the current legislation effectively means a backrupt is get by data he or she proves themselves innocent.
- Restrict access to assets by a Trustee, regardless of now held but external to the bankrupt, tied to the rgo of the tax dobt.

Why I should gamble with my family's future every time t take a business risk?

In future if a negligence claim arises or is threatened, the plaintiff's advisers will know that as well as pursuing my insurance cover they can new threat in to seek assets held by my family created more than 10 to 20 years ago as a result of prudent and conservative planning.

My intention has always been to be self sufficient in my retirement and not to depend on Government Social Security in my retirement years. Your proposals now put this at risk.

This legislation does not just apply to professionals; it applies equally to any contractor conducting their business through a corporate entity.

The simple solution to the mischief of those who brought about this change (the NSW Barristers) is to preclude them from practising their profession rather than to target those who have caused no mischief. Why has this not been addressed? In addition the Tax Office needs to be more vigilant in pursuing debt recovery.

I intend to raise the provide of this issue in the public arous to highlight the inappropriateness of this legislation.

I would be pleased to discuss this matter further with you or one of your officers should that be appropriate. My phone number is (08) 9438-1515.

Yours sincerely

Guy Bailey

Company Director

 $\mathbf{Cc}$

The Hon Phillip Ruddock M? Attorney General House of Representatives Parliament House Canberra ACT 2600