

Dear Maria Vamvakinou MP

I am an immigrant into Australia and am particularly happy to be here.

I have recently become an Australian citizen, because I believe in the Australian way of life.

I no longer think of myself as a migrant but rather a citizen. My daughter has adopted an Australian accent.

I am, however, a bit disturbed by the idea of multiculturalism.

I believe that Australia should open their borders to all other Nations, but immigrants need to fit in here and not try to change our culture.

Australia is founded on a Christian heritage and it is important that it remains so.

One only has to look at the mess in Europe today to see where Australia could be heading.

Regards
