

The Secretary of the Committee,

Like many of my peers I have become concerned at the failure of multiculturalism in Australia, particularly in Sydney.

The problem lies with a percentage of young muslims who have no wish to join the Australian community and are violently opposed to Australian values.

The government needs to ensure that migrants coming to Australia respect the Australian way of life, and equal rights for women. We need better integration of young muslims and less passive tolerance by communities of extremism.

The Government, both Liberal and Labor, have encouraged different cultures to live separate lives away from the mainstream.
