

Multiculturalism is not working in Australia. We have made it too easy to become Australian citizens, without proper research. For example, in the illegal entry boat that was deliberately set on fire, a couple of years ago, in which there were several fatalities, the N.T. Coroner found that one or more of the survivors was responsible. All on board, who survived, (except the crew) were given refugee status and will, no doubt, obtain citizenship. This is wrong. Many of the current asylum seekers are strict Muslims, and it appears that their first and foremost responsibility is to Allah. This is not good for our future! Previous migrants have had a hard road ahead of them to qualify for Australian citizenship. After World War 2, European settlers had to wait 7 years to qualify. Unless sponsored, they had to work at least 2 years in the "bush". The Australian government knew the background of each and every migrant. There was much stricter requirements on health and ideology.

Currently, our immigration policy is governed by people smugglers and asylum seekers. And answer me this, why did Australia , and the rest of the cricketing world, compete in the recent World Cup, if the Sri Lankan Government is as cruel and undemocratic as we are being told by economic refugees from that region?

In recent years arrivals, do not integrate with the overall Australian population the same as European migration, or the Vietnamese of the 70's. As stated, previous migrants have arrived, integrated and become, in the main, fine citizens. Today, arrivals have their religion as first priority and are desperate to "change" the Australian/ Western way of life to what they have left behind, including Sharia law.
