

Submission No 64

Inquiry into potential reforms of National Security Legislation

Organisation: Mr Rob Williams

Sent: Friday, 17 August 2012 2:55 PM
To: Committee, PJCIS (REPS)
Subject: RE: Inquiry into potential reforms of National Security Legislation

Dear Mr Secretary,

I have no problem with the Government and Nicola Roxby or whatever her name is, trying to implement Legislation to obtain the trillion, trillion, trillions of bytes of information passing around the Planet every nanosecond. I challenge you even to keep track of what I do, the mistakes I make, the information I access, the messages I send, to my friends, and to the enemies of the public YOU.

This is one.

I thought the English Tobacco Company took a kick in the guts the other day, but they are not finished, they intend to cut the price of tobacco in December. Ha Ha.

It is so obvious that the way to stop people smoking is to ban tobacco altogether and have the farmers in Victoria dig their crops in like they made us do up here at Mareeba. But you haven't been able to stop people smoking Marijuana either or make drugs to give them a kick. It didn't stop smoking. In fact it's increased. People have a right to drink alcohol, to play the Pokies, take drugs, to smoke and to use the Internet. And the Police, they have become part of the problem, taking bribes, on the take etc. The way Police Culture works is that new recruits are virtually trained into the graft system.

People will do whatever they want irrespective of what you idiots write on a piece of paper to try and stop us. There is no way you and your shiny bum bureaucrats can police it. So get real.

World leaders are proposing that , regulating marijuana for legal adult use around the world could help make a public health approach to the "true" drug addiction problem a much more manageable issue. At least that was the message from many of the senior member's of the global commission on drug policy, who congregated in N.Y.C. last June 2nd. Of course Nicola thinks she can control people's minds with all this, but there are 50 ways of communication and none of them needs the internet. All those who DON'T use it include Terrorists. It's like when John Howard called up certain types of weapons. I gave him my semi automatic .22 he gave me $300 I bought a better 10 shot .22 with a scope. Johnny "Flack Jacket" DH.

I can speak to people in Africa with my CB Radio, are you monitoring that Nicola????

But go ahead, it will keep you off the street and make you think you are earning your political salaries. HA.

Sincerely,

Rob Williams