Question:

Step 3d of the 'Balancing the Future Strategy' states: The APSC will review and develop training on the differential impact of gender in mainstream policy development.

- a) Has this work begun?
- b) Is the Office for Women involved with the development of this training material?
- c) When will this training material be rolled out in APS departments?
- d) Has the training be delivered in any departments yet?
- e) Will the training be delivered in all APS departments?
- f) Which departments will the training be delivered in?

Answer:

The Office for Women and the Australian Public Service Commission are working closely on tools to facilitate gender analysis across the Australian Public Service. Details on the content of the materials and the timing of any training are still being settled.
