(6) What risk analyses are informing the creation of the AIFFP?
(7) What were the recommendations made to the Department as part of the feasibility study into a Pacific financing facility led by John Eyers?

Answer

(1) DFAT has been undertaking consultations with Pacific governments on this announcement through Australia’s Pacific posts and discussions between Australian Ministers and their counterparts. Further consultations are planned in the lead up to 1 July, including by the AIFFP design team.

(2) None.

(3) This will be considered as part of the current design process of the AIFFP.

(4) See response to question 3 above.

(5) No. DFAT will be responsible for administration of the grant component of the AIFFP.

(6) Detailed risk analysis is a critical element of the current design process of the AIFFP.

(7) The study led by John Eyers did not specifically look at a Pacific financing facility, but explored whether expanding the range of financing options available to the aid program (including loans, equity, guarantees and insurance) would help deliver on the Foreign Policy White Paper objectives across the Indo-Pacific. The study’s findings will first be considered by DFAT’s Aid Governance Board on 26 March ahead of recommendations being put to Ministers.
