Looking for contributors...

Keo Films is currently researching for a 4 hour documentary series to be filmed in Mt Druitt.

We want to meet people interested in sharing their lives and stories with us.

Our aim is to learn about how people in your community get by day to day - with issues such as employment, housing, lack of money and family struggles as well as the things that make the community strong and resilient.

By hearing the stories of people and seeing how they live we plan to show communities in western Sydney with depth and complexity - not as clichéd stereotypes often portrayed by the media.

We want to meet a range of people - young and old - in order to get a realistic sense of the people who make up your community. No special talents required!

If successful, this documentary series will be filmed over a period of months, not days, in order to reflect the reality of day to day life.

We are inviting people and organisations to contact us if they are interested in hearing more about our project, becoming involved or just sharing their stories.
