Answer

Department

The Department of Education does not own any corporate cars.

The division of assets, including leases, between the Department of Education and the Department of Employment, following the abolition of the Department of Education, Employment and Workplace Relations (DEEWR), is still being finalised.

The Department of Education will be allocated a share of the former DEEWR leased cars (87) which are used for the transport and delivery of the department's equipment, supplies and correspondence; and to enable the department's staff, particularly in the state network, to attend to official business away from their office. The leased vehicles are located in Canberra and across most state, territory and regional offices.

Until the individual leases of the cars leased by the former DEEWR's are allocated to the gaining departments it is not possible to attribute costs or the distance travelled for leased vehicles for the Department of Education.
