Answers:

1. The Ministerial Council for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Affairs (MCATSIA) has not yet been formally dissolved. COAG agreed that MCATSIA will continue to function as a ministerial council until 30 June 2011. COAG has taken the view that Indigenous reform is best progressed after that date through Standing Councils, National Agreements and National Partnerships and through the Working Group on Indigenous Reform.
2. In its 2008-09 and 2009-10 reports to COAG, MCATSIA indicated that it had:
  - considered the findings of its population projects and of research from the Centre for Aboriginal Economic Policy Research exploring the dynamics and regional geography of Indigenous population and socioeconomic change; and
  - provided advice to the Working Group on Indigenous Reform on operational guidelines for service delivery to Indigenous people and options for strengthening Indigenous corporate governance.

3. MCATSIA will formally continue until 30 June 2011.
4. No work has been transferred from MCATSIA to another body at this time. Over the period to 30 June 2011, the Chair of MCATSIA has been asked to take the lead in examining the current work of MCATSIA and determine how it can be ceased, completed before 30 June 2011 or transferred to another group, such as the Working Group on Indigenous Reform or an officials group.
5. No work has been transferred from MCATSIA to another body at this time.
  - a. The Commonwealth, states and territories that signed up to the National Indigenous Reform Agreement (NIRA) are collectively responsible for the six Closing the Gap targets under the NIRA. MCATSIA has not been responsible for the targets.
  - b. The responsible Minister in the jurisdictions which are signatory to the National Partnerships will continue to be responsible for their administration and implementation.
