Question:

Senator Marshall asked at Hansard page 69/70:

In regard to information on the OEA website for people with non-English speaking backgrounds;

- (a) is there a separate website with this information or do people have to request to receive copies of information?
- (b) What is the hit rate on the web site from people with a non-English speaking background?

Answer:

- a) There is not a separate website for people with a non-English speaking background. Information for people with non-English speaking backgrounds is available for download from the main OEA website: www.oea.gov.au The phone number is also provided for the National Telephone Advisory Service, where assistance with written translations or interpreters can be requested.
- b) Specific data on the linguistic origins of people visiting www.oea.gov.au is not collected by the OEA.
