Dear Senator Paterson

I wish to correct evidence given during the Australian Public Service Commission's appearance before Senate Estimates on Monday 21 May 2018.

When asked about the actions undertaken in relation to building digital capability in the APS, I stated that the Commission had developed a suite of learning materials which could be used to develop digital capabilities.

I have since been advised that this was not strictly correct. The Commission has developed a suite of learning design standards which set out the skills, knowledge and attributes for specific digital skills. No training materials have been developed in relation to these standards.

A learning design standard and learning materials have been developed for the digital leadership program for senior executives.

Yours sincerely

Kerryn Vine-Camp
First Assistant Commissioner
