

To Senators on the Senate Select Committee on Climate Policy,

I want to see much higher targets put in place for reducing this countries CO2 output. The Government must commit to this because it was the general public who voted Labor on this promise and so far we have been let down. Big business can afford to change their practises and must move forward with us, the general public. This issue is far greater than the financial crisis because climate change, not acted on now, will cost us all in greater ways than finance.
