

Dear Secretary of Senate Select Committee,

Australia truly remains the 'lucky country' abounding in nature's wealth with a small population to share these resources. We also have human resources with people for whom education and a social safety net make life more about living than just surviving.

With these resources come the responsibility to act on climate change in a way that all developed countries should see as a leadership role for action TODAY that will be effective and promote action in developing countries in the near future with their capacity to respond supported by developed countries.

I appreciate the opportunity to have a say in the Senate Inquiry. Australia must do its fair share to prevent catastrophic climate change.

Yours sincerely,
Noni Walker
