

To Senators on the Senate Select Committee on Climate Policy,

Please make the targets on greenhouse gases stronger. We need more to be done on this issue. At 27, it is MY generation that will be the first to hear the question "Why didn't you prevent this issue when you had the chance?" I would like to be able to reply "We did the best we could" but at the rate we are making progress on this issue, I can only foresee the answer "Some of us cared, most of us didn't". Unless Climate policy is given some real teeth, my generation will be firmly pointing the finger at the generations above us. I want to be able to tell future generations of our achievements, rather than our failures. Please help me - us - to do this.

Name: Robert Lewis Macleod