

Dear Mr Simon Birmingham,

In regards to the means testing on solar grid feed P.V. systems. We feel that the present Federal labour Govt has done a great injustice to people in the industry, residents of Australia, and to the environment.

By placing a means test on the solar industry, not only has it slowed the industry, but has all but stopped people from wanting to install solar on their properties due to the lack of funding now available. The down turn is hurting everybody within this business.

It also shows that the Federal Govt is not "fair dinkum " about wanting to reduce greenhouse emissions, as we have more sunlight hours per day than most other places in the world. They have shown their true colours, by giving more funds, to the supposed cleaning, of the filthy fossil fuel, that we all know as coal. What a joke.

In keeping my email brief, all we can say is, either remove the means test or at least increase it to a more realistic level of income earned to $ 250,000.00, so that we can start to do something positive in reducing our carbon footprint.

Kindest Regards

Ray
